

Weir Was Here – Secret Rooms, Doors and Windows

New York photographer and Visiting Artist, Xiomáro (pronounced “SEE-oh-MAH-ro”), presents the first artistic collection of photographs documenting the beauty and textures of the interiors of the Julian Alden Weir House and Studio and the Mahonri Young Studio, which have never been seen by the general public. This unique photographic record was commissioned by the National Park Service as part of a major rehabilitation and restoration of these key historic buildings – the first such project in the history of the park. These structures are empty for the first time in at least 140 years and are highly unlikely to be empty again. Moreover, by 2013, the interiors will be significantly changed from how they appear now. So the photographs offer a rare peek of what lies within. Visit www.xiomaro.com to see the entire collection of 146 photographs.

Prints are available for as low as $20.
Visit www.xiomaro.com/purchase_prints.html for info.
10% of Gallery Print sales are donated to Doctors Without Borders.

Photo 1

Weir lived here
Original front door
opening into library

Photo 2

This is where he read
Shelf with three generations of books
(Weir, Young and Andrews)

Photo 3

He gazed at the landscape, lost in thought
Library stained glass window

Photo 4

He would knock for Pinky here
Door to downstairs bedroom where Albert Pinkham Ryder stayed.

Photo 5

Albert Pinkham Ryder
was here too
Downstairs bedroom looking towards library window

Photo 6

Great painters turned
this doorknob
Door from downstairs
bedroom to library

Photo 7

Their feet were warmed
by the stove
Cast iron Franklin stove in downstairs bedroom

Photo 8

Their stomachs were warmed by the bread
Beehive oven in east side of living room

Photo 9

Shutters were opened to take in the landscape
Window in west side of living room

Photo 10

Was he inspired by glass and dapple?
North window in dining room

Photo 11

He remembered
his roots in Europe
Delft tile on bottom of dining room fireplace

Photo 12

He surrounded himself
with the artful
Hand carving on dining room furnishing

Photo 13

And Weir painted here
Weir studio entrance

Photo 14

The stars sang together as he worked
Weir studio ceiling

Photo 15

His art inspired others
North window of Weir studio

Photo 16

They follow his footsteps to this day
Inside Mahonri Young's studio

Photo 17

And they leave their mark
Detail of sink in Young Studio