What?

In the summer of 2011, Weir Farm National Historic Site commissioned New York photographer and former Artist-in-Residence Xiomáro to create a photographic record of the interiors of the Weir House, Weir Studio, and Young Studio. Xiomáro was tasked with documenting the present state of the buildings' interiors, prior to the completion of the four-phase restoration project now underway. A selection of these images comprise the new exhibit on display at Weir Farm National Historic Site, Weir Was Here - Secret Rooms, Doors, and Windows, offering visitors a small glimpse inside these historic structures while they remain closed to the public. All three buildings are currently empty, which allowed Xiomáro the chance to focus on the details of these spaces -- features that might otherwise go unnoticed in a fully furnished setting. As the first artistic collection of photographs of the building interiors in the site's history, this exhibit captures the beauty and texture of these intimate spaces.
