Artist Xiomaro has Much to Share in his Collection of Art

Xio, the Farm, and the Big Apple

There's a tradition of artists, like impressionist J. Alden Weir, painting in the country and selling in the city. This photo series features views of contemporary New York City and Weir's historically preserved Connecticut home and grounds.

"The close-ups, which segue from modern grids to organic patterns, highlight the abstract beauty within," says Xio. These are two completely different scenarios, but each hold their own unique traits. You can visit xiomaro.com to check out more photography, as well as music and videos.

The pictures above display up close and personal shots of different scenes on the Weir Farm, which Xiomaro was an Artist-in-Residence back in 2011. These pictures will be on exhibit at the DiResta Collective in Sea Cliff from October to November 2013."
